

From: Andrew Chen
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 12/10/01 2:43pm
Subject: opinions about anti-trust settlement with Microsoft

I think that in the settlement Microsoft must donate real money, instead of computers and (Microsoft) software, so that schools can have their own choices of computers and software.

We want to give the freedom back to the customers and fair competition to companies. If the schools have to accept the Windows again as the results of anti-trust settlement, then such settlement ends up committing more monopoly for Microsoft. If so, I do not believe that the federal attorneys are doing a good job to protect the consumers.

Andrew Chen

CC: Andrew Chen